

David Moore

I strongly oppose the moving forward of even the entertainment of the idea of allowing produced water into our agriculture supply chain especially without a robust way to ensure that the water is nothing less than 100% free of contaminants. In addition to this idea I believe it will kill Texas agriculture economy in that no consumer will want to purchase or consume our products. And even if it was allowed I don't trust the tracing of the source of what we consume to know whether I have purchased something where produced water was used in any part of the chain of production including beef which was fed from something grown with produced water.